MRI Pancreas & Bile Ducts (MRCP)

Clinical History:

Intermittent upper quadrant pain with slightly deranged LFTs ?fatty liver on previous ultrasound
?focal liver or pancreatic lesions.

Technique:

Non contrast study was performed as the patient describes prior allergic reaction to Gadolinium and has declined intravenous contrast today.

Findings:

No evidence of significant fatty change identified on the in and outer phase imaging. Tiny liver cysts are present measuring up to 3mm.

No biliary dilation is identified. No filling defect is identified within the biliary tree and the gallbladder is intact and normal in appearance.

The pancreas has a normal appearance and no pancreatic duct dilation is identified.

The adrenal glands, kidneys and spleen have normal appearances.

CONCLUSION:

Suboptimal/incomplete study given the lack intravenous Gadolinium. Tiny scattered liver cysts are present. No biliary dilation is identified. No filling defect identified within the biliary tree. The pancreas has a normal non contrast appearance with no pancreatic duct dilation. No definite evidence of fatty change of the liver.
