To whom it may concern,

Re: Referral of Colin Butler

Colin Butler presented to The Well Collective clinic for a Naturopathy consult on 09.06.23

He presented with excessive bloating, irregular stools, fatigue, and brain fog. After taking a full case history, it was revealed that the digestive complaints and fatigue have been ongoing for a few years.

The patient completed a complete microbiome mapping test which revealed an overgrowth of klebsiella, a deficiency in secretory IgA and a deficiency in Bifidobacterium species. Blood was also detected in the stool. Due to the combination of these markers, I would like to rule out IBD, ulcers and any other more serious illness. For these reasons I believe Colin would be a candidate for colonoscopy and/or intestinal endoscopy.

In the mutual care of our patient, I would appreciate the sharing of any relevant information that will assist with the health management of Colin Butler. Thank you in advance for your consideration.

Please contact me if you require further information relating to our patient.

Kind regards,

Kit Tomlinson
