Dear Maureen

Thanks for referring this fellow for review. He had a repeat echocardiogram in January. It showed minimal to mild mitral regurgitation very similar to the original echo. There was no persistent pericardial effusion at that stage. The mild mitral regurgitation might be happy to review every 5 years with an echocardiogram to see if it progresses or to see if it is quite a stable situation. I do not think this has got anything to do with his post viral/postvaccination syndrome. I understand has previously been investigated with an MRI which did not demonstrate any evidence of scarring. I have reassured him as to the benign nature of the chest pains that he is experiencing and have encouraged him to continue to exercise as much as is possible.

Yours sincerely

DR PETER WADDY
